NEW QUESTION: 3
You have a Windows Server 2008 R2 Enterprise Root CA . Security policy prevents port 443 and port 80 from being opened on domain controllers and on the issuing CA.
You need to allow users to request certificates from a Web interface. You install the Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) server role.
What should you do next?
A. Configure the Online Responder role service on a member server.
B. Configure the Certificate Enrollment Web Service role service on a member server.
C. Configure the Online Responder role service on a domain controller.
D. Configure the Certificate Enrollment Web Service role service on a domain controller.
Answer: B

Explanation:
The Certificate Enrollment Web Service role provides a web interface (ports 443/80) for requesting certificates from a CA. The question indicates that company security policy does not allow ports 443/80 to be open on a domain controller, so the role service would need to be installed on a member server to satisfy this requirement.
The Online Responder role service helps reduce the traffic involved with CRL updates. It does not provide web access to certificate services.
