NEW QUESTION: 1
An organization plans to contract with an outside service provider to host its corporate web site. The MOST important concern for the information security manager is to ensure that:
A. an audit of the service provider uncovers no significant weakness.
B. the contract includes a nondisclosure agreement (NDA) to protect the organization's intellectual property.
C. the contract should mandate that the service provider will comply with security policies.
D. the third-party service provider conducts regular penetration testing.
Answer: C
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:
It is critical to include the security requirements in the contract based ON the company's security policy to ensure that the necessary security controls are implemented by the service provider. The audit is normally a one-time effort and cannot provide ongoing assurance of the security. A nondisclosure agreement (NDA) should be part of the contract; however, it is not critical to the security of the web site. Penetration testing alone would not provide total security to the web site; there are lots of controls that cannot be tested through penetration testing.

NEW QUESTION: 2
An auditor obtains knowledge about a new client's business and its industry to:
A. Understand the events and transactions that may have an effect on the client's financial statements.
B. Make constructive suggestions concerning improvements to the client's internal control.
C. Evaluate whether the aggregation of known misstatements causes the financial statements taken as a whole to be materially misstated.
D. Develop an attitude of professional skepticism concerning management's financial statement assertions.
Answer: A
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:
Choice "D" is correct. The auditor should obtain knowledge of the client's business and its industry in order to determine the effect of transactions, events, and practices on the client's financial statements.

Choice "A" is incorrect. Constructive suggestions concerning improvements in the new client's internal control are generally made after the study and evaluation of the client's internal control, performed subsequent to planning. Knowledge about the new client's business and its industry is generally obtained during planning.
Choice "B" is incorrect. The auditor should have an attitude of professional skepticism in conducting the engagement, but this attitude is not necessarily related to the auditor's knowledge of the new client's business and its industry.
Choice "C" is incorrect. The auditor should evaluate whether the aggregation of known misstatements materially affects the financial statements, but this is done near the audit's conclusion. Knowledge about the new client's business and its industry is generally obtained during planning.
